Tony was born and raised in the City of Albany, the son of Clarence DeLisle Sr. and Mary Curso DeLisle. He was a 1961 graduate, on the National Honor Society from St. Joseph's Academy. After finishing high school, he found his true talent as a typesetter in the printing industry. There he displayed his talent through his eye for perfection where he worked for various large Union printing companies around the capital district.

Tony found his true joy spending most of his time on his property. At his log cabin in Westerlo is where he felt most at ease. It didn't matter to him if he was mowing his fields, riding his ATV, hunting or just taking a walk around his property, that was his happy place. Tony was also an avid sportsman at heart, with trout fishing, hunting, camping is what he truly enjoyed. However, his most cherished moments were spent with his family, friends and his beloved dog Jack. Whether it was at a family gathering, a trip to Field and Stream or an annual camping trip to Putt's Pond, Tony always had wonderful stories to tell.

Tony was a devoted member of the South Westerlo Congregational Christian Church for many years. It was not only a place of worship and community, but also the groundwork of his faith, inspiring his consistent willingness to help out others in need. Tony was well known for his generous spirit, unwavering loyalty and quiet strength. The church is where Tony met a lot of friends who inspired him to become involved in the community.

Survivors include his children Teresa Edwards, Christopher (Lynn) DeLisle, Peter Edwards and his 7 grandchildren, Angela (Matt), Cameron, Kateri, John, Bryan, Anthony and Jaclyn. As well as 2 great grandchildren Tyler and Cora, also survived by several nieces and nephews.

“ I’m so sorry that, due to illness, I was unable to attend Tony’s wake and funeral. He and I had a nice relationship as we enjoyed conversing about mutual interests. Old Albany, firearms and especially railroads and electric trains. He was a good friend and I’ll definitely miss him.
