“ He wasn’t my grandfather by blood, but in every way that mattered, he was family. He had a quiet strength about him—the kind that made you feel safe just being nearby. Whether it was his stories, his advice, or simply his presence, he had a way of making life feel a little steadier, a little warmer.

He taught me more than he probably ever realized—about kindness, patience, and how to show up for the people you care about. He never asked for recognition, but he gave so much of himself to others, and that’s something I’ll carry with me always.

His absence leaves a space that can’t truly be filled, but his impact will never fade. In the memories we share, in the lessons he passed on, and in the love he gave so freely, he will always be with us.

We will miss him deeply, and we are better for having known him.

Sincerely,

Alessandro Albanese
